Kass and Bil-lie saw the o-cean, and a steep roc-ky ridge, looked down on the har-bour and that fa-mous arched bridge; cra-zy traf-fic on roads bu-sy peo-ple in the streets, the pace of the ci - ty made Bil - lie feel weak!

5

8

11

Their flight path con-tin-ued, they flew to the west, fly-ing in - to the sun-set, they thought it was best, to camp for the eve-ning, watch the sun go-ing down, "To - mor - row,"said Bil - lie "we'll go the 'Gate, Wal-gett town!"

15

18

23

They made them-selves com-fy, snug-gled in from the cold, they were

26

gob smacked and speech-less, at blues, pinks and golds; the co-lours un-be-lieve a-ble,so

29

vi - brant, so deep, a sun-set spec-ta-cu-lar, be-fore the sun went to sleep!

Kass - Koo-ka-bur-ra gazed at our eve-ning star, say-ing "hel- lo" to the moon, dis-tance seemed not that far; sud-den - ly she said "Bil - lie, we'll ne - ver be lost," as she spot - ted a - bove__ them our great gui-ding Sou - thern Cross!

39

41

Now Bil - lie well knew how to look up and star gaze, but these big wes-tern skies! He was tru-ly a - mazed! To think of the peo - ple from 47

44

so long a - go, Ga - mi - la - roy ga - zing The sto-ries they know!

50

Stars twin-kled so bold-ly, the dark and the dance, the e-mu in the sky, plei-

54

a - des en-hanced, our know-ledge and hope for a fu-ture so bright, we'd share it to - ge - ther on this great wes-tern night. rall. 2 60-61

57

bush kan-ga-roos, fly-ing o - ver our scrub-land, Kasscalled out "koo - koo!"

73

They werestunned at the vast-ness, of the great o - pen plains, ri - vers

76

Bar-won and Na - moi, mee-ting up af-terrain Bil-lie's ex - cite-ment nowgrow-ing, Kass could feel it in her bones, that town of Wal - gett would just feel like home!

79

83

The news in the ci - ty told of drought so se-vere, and

87

out here at Wal-gett, it haddragged on for years; but rains had now fal - len and had turned things a-round, chick-peas, wheat, ca-no-la, jum-ping out of the ground!

90

94

They flewstraight in-to Fox St pulled up at Stones Throw, they or-dered a cof-fee, 'cause

98

that was 'the go,' Kas - s' bright col - oured ly - cra, Bil - lie's suave soun-ding call, made them wel-comed by lo-cals, not one, but them all!

100

103

I - G - A sold them bird seed; they lunched at the spor - to, dropped

106

mail at the P - O., popped in to Blend & Co; they bought su - shi for din - ner, or - dered fruit juice made fresh, 'cause Bil lie and Kass knew fresh was heal - thy and best!

109

112

They threwtraps in the ri - ver, and fished from a hand line, Yel - low

116

Bel - ly and yab - bies, tas - ted oh, so di - vine! Frank Wright taught them pain - ting, in his own X - ray style, af - ter ex - pert in - struc - tion they left with a smile.

119

123

They walked a - round the le - vee, and duck - dived off the weir, saw

126

sen - ti - nel scar - trees, there for ma - ny a year; Kass led them in ex - er - cise on 129

o - val num - ber one, while get - ting their Vite - D, from the warm gol - den sun!

132

At St Jo - ey's the Pri - ma - ry, Dis - tance Ed and High School, Kass and 135

Bil - lie both pro - mised they'd not break a - ny rules; they taught kids to boot - scoot with

138

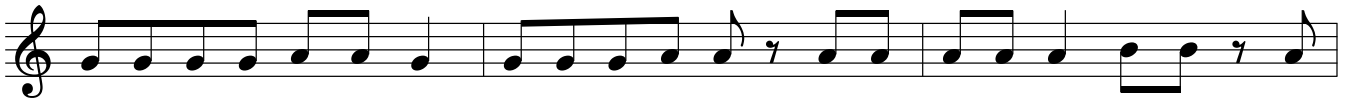

Moo-ram-bil-la tunes, and tweet with a twin- kle, they'd smashed it by noon!

142

They took off from the le-vee, waved Wal-gett good-bye, next part of the ad-ven-ture was Col-la-re-ne-bri; Bil-lie said to Kass smi-ling, "First stop is Mid-ge-ry, to vi-sit An-nie Ber-rell, with hair cra-zi-ly cur-ly!"

146

149

153

An-nie showed them 'tough love', in her u-su-al style, they

156

LOVED her loud laugh, it makes eve-ry-one smile; as they set off a-gain, An-nie

159

said "you be good, when you stop and spend time in my Col-ly neigh-bour-hood!"

162-163

164

Now kids heard that two birds were crui-sin' a-round, and hoped

167

Bil-lie and Kass would land in their play-ground, A-li-son Hynch got them rea-dy they stood in a bunch, 'cause Bil-lie bought them sau-sa-ges, from the but-cher for lunch.

170

At the ri - ver, the lo - cals took them on a boat ride, showed them

177

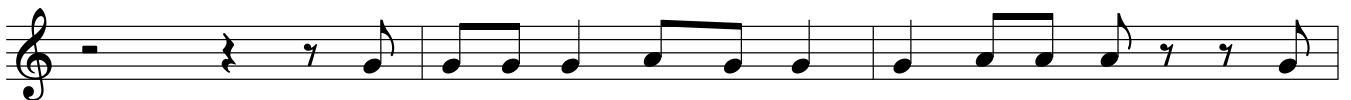

best spots for fish-ing, Yel-low Bel - ly their pride; ad - mi - ring the old ri - ver gums stand-ing tall, both Bil - lie and Kass thought this was the be all!

180

184

Then sud-den - ly through the gum's trunks by the bank, an 187

e - mu they spot-ted he was tall, he was lank; he looked at them square-ly, then took turn to run, till our ly-cra clad koo-ka thought she'd join in the fun!

190

194

And quick as a flash, Kass, char-ming and game, flew down to the e - mu and asked him his name; "I'm called Dhi - na - wan Dan," — came his 200

198

strong, proud re-ply, "Well, come join our ad-ven - ture," said Kass. "Don't be shy!"
